Ways of FSB Agents Infiltration in Europe. The Anticult Movement is Just One of Them: Part 3

February 2, 2025 · 17 mins read

This article continues a series of publications about the connections between agents of the international anticult network and Russian intelligence agencies. Previous articles (Part 1 and Part 2) discussed ties between members of the Latvian branch of FECRIS and the exposed FSB agent, Latvian MP Tatjana Ždanoka. Here, we will examine FSB's influence on the international anticult network through its Russian representatives.

It is worth recalling that the ideological and coordinating center of international anticultism is currently located in Russia: it is the Russian pro-religious association RACIRS headed by Alexander Dvorkin. Since 2009, the president of Russian RACIRS also served as vice president of the European anticult federation FECRIS, and since 2022, he has been a member of the FECRIS board of directors. Alexander Dvorkin has repeatedly been spotted in close interaction with individuals and organizations directly connected to the FSB (the current successor to the Soviet KGB). Relevant facts have already been partially exposed on the portal actfiles.org.

Ties with the FSB are not limited to the president of RACIRS: other Russian anticultists are also linked to this intelligence agency. Notably, this hasn't prevented some of them from attending FECRIS conferences in European countries and holding membership in the federation.

Let's examine the activities of Alexander Dvorkin's colleague, Roman Silantyev , based on his own statements about working for the FSB, as well as his anti-Ukrainian activities and close connections with European and American anticultists.

Roman Silantyev's connection to the FSB

In 2019, Roman Silantyev confirmed that he collaborates with the FSB. According to him, he lectures intelligence officers on destructology and prepares expert reports on terrorist organizations [1].

Screenshots sourced from the Russian news portal INTERFAX [1]

Destructology is a discipline invented by Roman Silantyev in 2019. As the creator of destructology himself admitted, “Well, yes, two years ago I came up with a new applied science. Many doctors of science are guilty of doing that. It’s considered that you’re not a real doctor unless you invent some new science.” [2]

“It’s a kind of greatly expanded sectology that allows us to deal not only with cults and sects, but also with mages, psycho-cults, youth subcultures, terrorists, and generally everything that is dangerous to the human soul…” [3].

It is noteworthy that he prepares expert reports for the FSB. In 2009, Roman Silantyev was appointed deputy chairman of the Expert Council on State Religious Evaluation under the Russian Ministry of Justice. Alexander Dvorkin was appointed the council chairman. It is quite logical to assume that these two anticultists have been collaborating with the FSB in compiling religious expert reports at least since the beginning of the council operation in 2009. However, given that appointments to such positions in the Russian Ministry of Justice as those held by RACIRS president Dvorkin and his colleague Silantyev cannot occur without oversight from Russian intelligence agencies, it is likely that their cooperation with the FSB began long before the actual appointments.

Incidentally, in that same year 2009, an international anticult symposium of FECRIS was held in St. Petersburg, where Alexander Dvorkin was elected the new vice president of FECRIS. The role of St. Petersburg as a coordination and interaction center for Russian intelligence agents with their counterparts operating in other countries, as well as a meeting place for agents with their supervisors, was previously revealed in the article “Ways of FSB Agents Infiltration in Europe. The Anticult Movement is Just One of Them: Part 1.”

Currently, almost no legal case banning a religious organization in Russia proceeds without Silantyev’s involvement.

Les avantages avancés sont multiples : Il est un lien entre les associations, et un outil efficient pour sensibiliser et interpeller les gens par la fréquence de l'apparition du logo.
Il y a peu de gouvernements qui travaillent sur ce sujet des sectes et il est important de faire connaître en leur temps les décisions politiques qui sont prises ; cela aiderait chaque pays concerné.
Ceci est approuvé par vote à l'unanimité

6. Comité Scientifique
Pour le Comité Scientifique, Jean-Pierre JOUGLA explique le travail accompli sur la problématique des « femmes dans les sectes » par l'écoute des victimes de sectes et l'analyse de 35 témoignages directs d'anciens adeptes, ce qui sera développé pendant le Colloque du 21 mai 2016 dans le cadre du thème retenu « Femmes dans les sectes, gourelles et victimes ».

David CLARK souligne que précisément vient de se tenir à NEW-YORK, la 60ème session de la « Commission de la condition de la femme », de l'ONU dans le cadre la Commémoration officielle de « La journée internationale de la Femme » portant sur « L'élimination des femmes de la situation de victime » ; et il fait une présentation de son travail.

7. CONFÉRENCE de la FECRIS en 2017-Projets

7.1 Le Lieu: Option pour l'Italie. Luigi CORVAGLIA fera des propositions.
L'assemblée générale confie au CA de choisir une proposition, selon l'intérêt de la FECRIS et de ses objectifs.

7.2 Le Thème :
Des échanges font valoir pour l'avenir l'intérêt d'une réflexion sur la problématique judiciaire à partir de décisions de justice dans chacun de nos pays, des arguments de certains avocats, et des difficultés à gérer le problème dans la mesure où ce sont des actes délibérés qui sont posés ; ceci en vue de propositions pour une jurisprudence européenne.

Mais pour 2017 le Comité Scientifique propose une étude des liens qui peuvent exister entre « emprise sectaire et radicalisme ou extrémisme islamique ». Sujet d'actualité mais très sensible.

Proposition : pour le COLLOQUE FECRIS 2017, le Comité Scientifique francophone et le Comité Scientifique anglophone sont chargés de formuler un titre autour du thème « L'emprise mentale et le processus de radicalisation »
Réponse attendue en juin 2016.
Ceci est accepté à l'unanimité.

TERRORISM

The former MIVILUDES president Serge Blisko shared the stage with Roman Silantyev and Alexander Dvorkin [7]. Articles on actfiles.org have earlier mentioned MIVILUDES members who compromised themselves by supporting Russia's occupation of Crimea. It should be recalled that in 2019, another former MIVILUDES president, Georges Fenech, became part of a delegation led by French MP Thierry Mariani that visited occupied Crimea. The trip was funded and organized by the Russian government. Among those who welcomed the delegation was Leonid Slutsky, chairman of the Russian State Duma's Committee on International Affairs. The purpose of the French delegation was to showcase how prosperously Crimea was supposedly doing under Russian occupation.

How the French MIVILUDES compromised itself with Russian extremists

MIVILUDES is the acronym for "Inter-ministerial mission for monitoring and combating cultic deviances", a French government controversial agency belonging to the French Ministry of Interior.

MIVILUDES (acronym for French Inter-ministerial mission for monitoring and combating cultic deviances) is a government agency belonging to the French Ministry of Interior, tasked with reporting on, and fighting against, what they call "cultic deviances", a term that has no legal definition but means in fact that they are fighting against movements they consider to be "cults". They have complete arbitrary autonomy to determine which religion, movement or spirituality should be included in that concept.

Support of the Russian occupation of Crimea by a MIVILUDES' current member and former President

Fenech was replaced as President of MIVILUDES in 2013 but came back to join its Orientation Council in 2021. Nevertheless, his acquaintance with the Putin's regime had not stopped in the meantime. In 2019, he was part of a delegation led by French MP Thierry Mariani that visited the occupied Crimea, a trip paid and organized by Russians (The "Russian Fund for Peace", according to Mariani). They were received by Leonid Slutsky, Chairman of the Committee on International Affairs in the Russian State Duma, and Vladimir Konstantinov, a Crimean MP who is accused of high treason in Ukraine, sanctioned by the European Union since 2014, and a strong supporter of Putin and the Russian annexation of Crimea. The purpose for the French delegation was to testify about how well Crimea was doing under Russian occupation. When journalists asked Mariani who was part of the delegation[11], Georges Fenech asked him to lie and say that he was not there, which Mariani reluctantly accepted to do. Unfortunately, French journalists from Liberation had recognized Fenech in a Russian documentary that flanked the visit, and Mariani had to admit Fenech was part of the delegation which had even met Vladimir Putin himself in Simferopol.

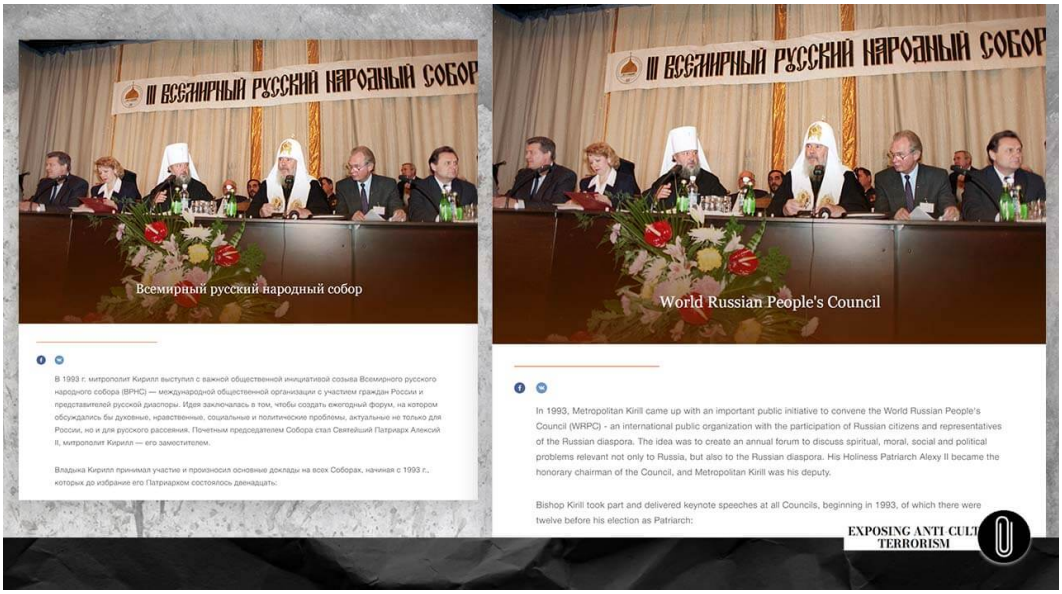
Roman Silantyev's role in the World Russian People's Council (WRPC) established by the Russian Orthodox Church

Investigation of the activities of Dvorkin's colleague, anticultist Roman Silantyev, and the positions he's been holding in various organizations sheds new light on the French delegation's visit to Crimea in 2019 and the involvement of anticult player and former MIVILUDES president Georges Fenech in that visit. Now, let's explore some aspects of Silantyev's activities.

Since 2006, Roman Silantyev has been actively engaged in the World Russian People's Council (WRPC) established by the Russian Orthodox Church (ROC). WRPC was created in 1993 on the initiative of then-Metropolitan Kirill (Gundyaev), now the ROC Patriarch [8]. It is interesting that WRPC emerged in the same year when Alexander Dvorkin launched the anticult movement in Russia under the ROC patronage and founded the Center for Religious Studies in the name of Hieromartyr Irenaeus, Bishop of Lyons.

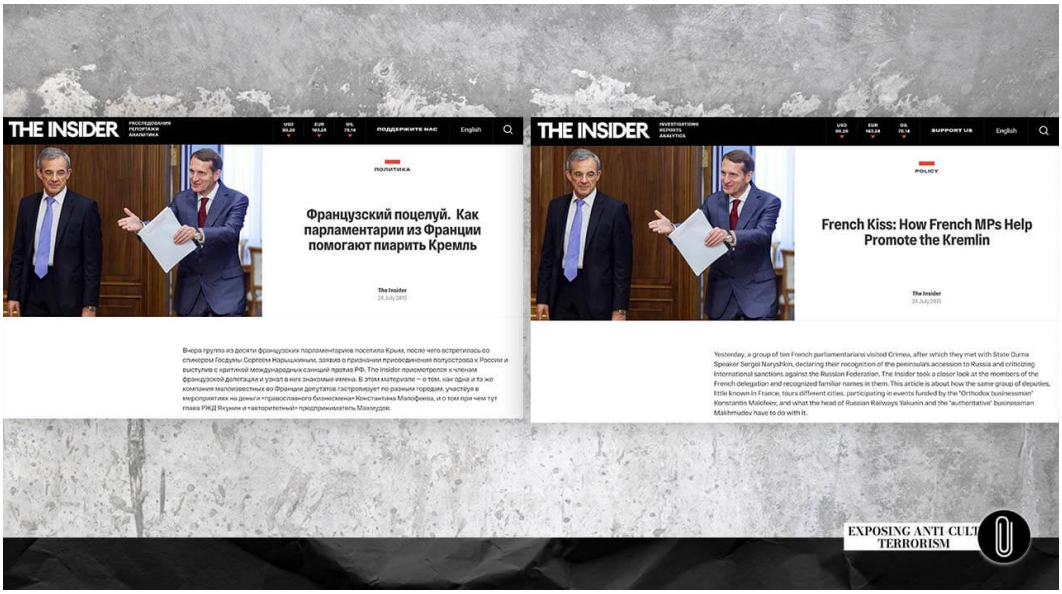
* In the same year 1993, synchronously with Russia, anticult activities were launched in other countries of the world, including Spain where the idea of creating the French FECRIS was voiced at an anticult symposium, and the Czech Republic where an anticult association Society for the Study of Sects and New Religious Movements was founded.



Screenshots from the official website of the Russian Orthodox Church Patriarch [8]

WRPC is currently led by the ROC Patriarch Kirill, while its vice president until 2024 was Orthodox oligarch Konstantin Malofeev, the founder of Tsargrad TV[9]. The Tsargrad portal owned by Malofeev frequently cites anticultist Roman Silantyev. Silantyev used to serve as executive director of WRPC programs. Today, he heads the WRPC Human Rights Center [10] and sits on the WRPC Presidium alongside figures such as Sergey Shoigu, Yelena Mizulina, Vladimir Medinsky, Alexander Dugin, and Leonid Slutsky [11].

Let's recall that Leonid Slutsky was mentioned above in connection with the Crimea visit of the French delegation including Thierry Mariani and former MIVILUDES president and anticultist Georges Fenech. As it turns out, French MP Thierry Mariani who led the delegation had previously visited the Crimean Peninsula in 2015 and 2016, also at the invitation of Slutsky. The key figure financing those trips was the Orthodox oligarch Konstantin Malofeev. This was highlighted in 2015 by The Insider in an investigative article, "French Kiss: How French Parliamentarians Help Promote the Kremlin" [12].



Screenshots from The Insider website

"Yesterday, a group of ten French MPs visited Crimea, after which they met with State Duma Speaker Sergei Naryshkin, declared their recognition of the peninsula's accession to Russia, and criticized international sanctions against the Russian Federation. The Insider took a closer look at the members of the French delegation and recognized familiar names among them. This article is about how the same group of MPs little known in France tours different cities, participating in events funded by the 'Orthodox businessman' Konstantin Malofeev..."

Thanks to The Insider's investigation, Thierry Mariani's ties were found to extend beyond Konstantin Malofeev up to Sergey Naryshkin. We'd like to talk about the latter in more detail since Naryshkin is the director of Russia's Foreign Intelligence Service (SVR) that succeeded the KGB's First Chief Directorate and the closest ally of Vladimir Putin. Latvian MP Tatjana Ždanoka also admitted having meetings with both Naryshkin and Putin after leaked emails exposed her work for Russian intelligence under the supervision of FSB Fifth Service officers. This revelation was covered in The Insider's article, "Exclusive: Latvian Member of European Parliament is an agent of Russian Intelligence, leaked emails confirm" [13]:

"Leaked emails between Ždanoka and her two known Russian case officers include explicit, detailed reports from Ždanoka to her handlers, describing her work as a European legislator, particularly as those official duties relate to fostering pro-Kremlin sentiment in her native Baltic region. Other correspondence involves arranging physical meetings in Moscow or Brussels between Ždanoka and her Russian handler, along with requests for funding from Russian sources to underwrite her political activities in Latvia and the European Parliament."

"According to the emails, her first case officer was a veteran FSB cadre from the St. Petersburg central directorate, Dmitry Gladey, 74, who ran Ždanoka from approximately 2004 to 2013. After 2013, Ždanoka was in regular contact with Sergei Beltyukov, an FSB operative since 1993."

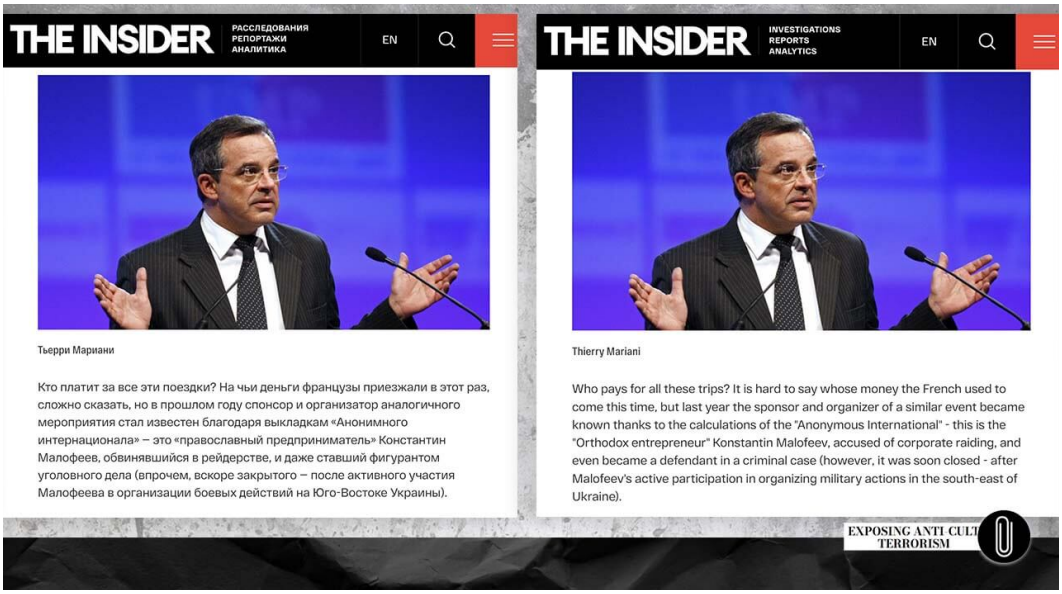
"'I can testify that the only people with whom I have sat at the same table, and with the certain knowledge that they are/were Russian FSB officers, are Vladimir Putin and Sergei Naryshkin,' Ždanoka said. (Naryshkin is the current director of Russia's Foreign Intelligence Service (SVR), successor of the KGB's First Chief Directorate)."

We previously referenced the FSB agent Tatjana Ždanoka in our article "Ways of FSB Agents Infiltration in Europe. The Anticult Movement is Just One of Them: Part 1", noting that members of her political party, the Latvian Russian Union (LKS), included Latvian anticultists affiliated with FECRIS as well as colleagues of Alexander Dvorkin and other anticult agents across various countries. Furthermore, Ždanoka directly interacted with Dvorkin himself.

Yet, let's go back to The Insider's investigation on Thierry Mariani [12]. An excerpt from the article "French Kiss: How French Parliamentarians Help Promote the Kremlin" reveals the depth of his connections:

"A little earlier, the same Mariani visited the Economic Forum in St. Petersburg, and even earlier, Naryshkin himself came to Paris where he met with Mariani and his colleagues."

"Who pays for all those trips? It's unclear who funded the French delegates' visit this time, but last year, the sponsor and organizer of a similar event was revealed by 'Anonymous International' to be the 'Orthodox entrepreneur' Konstantin Malofeev. He had previously been accused of corporate raiding and was the subject of a criminal case that was quickly closed following his active role in organizing hostilities in southeastern Ukraine." Thierry Mariani himself admitted that he knows Malofeev personally.



Screenshots from The Insider website

This article touches only briefly on the activities of two anticult agents, the Russian and the French one, both being connected with Konstantin Malofeev to varying degrees. While this connection might seem incidental in isolated cases, it is far from unique. The objectives pursued by anticult agents in European countries often suspiciously align with those of their Russian counterparts, benefiting the ideologues of the Russian World narrative.

Additionally, the influence of ROC and FSB on the anticult movement further undermines the credibility of anticultists. In this regard, we cannot but mention that Malofeev has been directly participating in the informational and ideological promotion of the Russian World throughout the Russo-Ukrainian war. He was also heavily involved in the media preparation for the military conflict in eastern Ukraine.

Here, it is worth recalling the long-standing antidemocratic activities of Ukrainian anticult agents controlled by Alexander Dvorkin. Acting as mouthpieces for their Russian supervisors from RACIRS, they carried out operations to destabilize Ukraine, demoralize its population, recruit new agents, ideologically condition Ukrainian citizens, introduce antidemocratic Nazi rhetoric into Ukrainian media favorable to Kremlin propagandists, disseminate disinformation and propaganda, and spread the Russian World ideology. For more details, read the article "Europe, Open Your Eyes if You Don't Want War".

In light of new information linking the two anticultists to the prominent Russian propagandist and Orthodox oligarch Konstantin Malofeev, the information warfare waged among Ukrainian citizens by recruited agents posing as anticult activists takes on a whole new perspective. The Russian World is a tight-knit network, and its agents operate with fine-tuned organization and coordination, in perfect alignment with its central hub in Russia. Today, we can see the results of this network's efforts in the bloodshed and deaths of innocent Ukrainian civilians.

To understand what RACIRS' anticult agents are aiding in democratic countries, it is essential to note another widely known fact about Malofeev. He is considered one of the main sponsors of the so-called Donetsk and Luhansk People's Republics (DNR and LNR), while his associates were directly involved not only in the information warfare, but also in the initial outbreak of military conflict in eastern Ukraine in 2014. Igor Strelkov (Girkin), a close associate of Malofeev [14], admitted that his unit actually started the war in Ukraine. He shared this in an interview with the newspaper "Zavtra" [15] in 2014.

"The wheel of war that continues to this day was set in motion by our unit." — Igor Strelkov

Russian World ideology in WRPC activities and Silantyev's rhetoric

The ideology of the Russian World is also reflected in the activities of WRPC and the rhetoric of Roman Silantyev. For example, on March 27, 2024, WRPC convened its 25th session during which the participants approved a mandate (commanding resolution) titled "The Present and Future of the Russian World." Below is an excerpt from this mandate published on the official website of ROC (MP), where the war in Ukraine is described as "holy" [16]:

"The special military operation is a new stage of the national liberation struggle of the Russian people against the criminal Kiev regime and the collective West behind it, conducted in the lands of South-Western Rus' since 2014. During the SMO, the Russian people with arms in their hands defend their life, freedom, statehood, civilizational, religious, national, and cultural identity, as well as the right to live on their own land within the borders of the united Russian state. From a spiritual and moral point of view, the special military operation is a Holy War in which Russia and its people, defending the unified spiritual space of the Holy Rus', fulfills the mission of the 'Holder,' protecting the world from the onslaught of globalism and the victory of the West that has fallen into satanism.

After the end of SMO, the entire territory of modern Ukraine should enter into a zone of exclusive influence of Russia."

Order of the XXV World Russian People's Council "The Present and Future of the Russian World"

March 27, 2024 6:00 PM

Print version

During the cathedral congress, which took place on March 27, 2024 in the Hall of Church Councils of the Cathedral of Christ the Savior in Moscow under the chairmanship of the head of the WRC, His Holiness Patriarch Kirill of Moscow and All Russia, the Instruction of the XXV World Russian People's Council "The Present and Future of the Russian World" was approved (Moscow, November 27-28, 2023).

This document, summarizing the most significant proposals put forward within the framework of the work of expert platforms and during the Plenary Session, is the programmatic document of the XXV World Russian People's Council, as well as an order addressed to the legislative and executive authorities of Russia.

1. Special military operation

The special military operation is a new stage of the national liberation struggle of the Russian people against the criminal Kyiv regime and the collective West behind it, which has been waged on the lands of South-West Rus' since 2014. During the SMO, the Russian people, with arms in hand, defend their life, freedom, statehood, civilizational, religious, national and cultural identity, as well as the right to live on their own land within the borders of a single Russian state. From a spiritual and moral point of view, the special military operation is a Holy War, in which Russia and its people, defending the single spiritual space of Holy Rus', fulfill the mission of the "Restrainer", protecting the world from the onslaught of globalism and the victory of the West that has fallen into Satanism.

After the end of the SVO, the entire territory of modern Ukraine must enter the zone of exclusive influence of Russia. The possibility of the existence on this territory of a Russophobic political regime hostile to Russia and its people, as well as a political regime controlled from an external center hostile to Russia, must be completely excluded.

Screenshots from the Moscow Patriarchate official website patriarchia.ru: Mandate of the 25th World Russian People's Council "The Present and Future of the Russian World." March 27, 2024

At the same WRPC session, discussions also addressed migration policy, or rather anti-migration policy. Details on the anti-immigrant and anti-Islamic narratives including those reflected in the WRPC mandate were previously noted in the article "At The Threshold of a Civilizational War".

Roman Silantyev is known for his radical anti-Islamic views, too. For instance, in 2016, when commenting on his report titled "Ethno-Religious Threats," Silantyev made an almost explicit call for violent shooting of Muslims in Russia. Here's an excerpt from an article on the "Golos Islama" ("Voice of Islam") portal [17], analyzing his report:

"The report clearly indicates that this doesn't only concern Wahhabis. The stated figure of 700,000 and the listed regions of concern suggest that nearly every Muslim who adheres to Islamic laws is targeted. Moreover, labeling the Caliphate idea as a terrorist threat obviously points to the pursuit of eliminating all dedicated Muslims."

"'We must drastically toughen legislation and stop thinking that peaceful negotiations and agreements can solve anything. We simply need to exterminate them. Just as we killed fascists, we must kill Wahhabis,' the religious scholar concluded."

Практически открытый призыв, к отстрелу мусульман в России, сделал комментируя свой доклад "Этнорелигиозные угрозы" Роман Силантьев. Из доклада видно, что имеются в виду совсем не только ваххабиты. Потому как озвученная цифра в 700 тыс. и озвученные места распространения угрозы говорят о том, что под прицел ставится практически каждый мусульманин, который хоть как то придерживается законов Ислама. А причисление к террористическим угрозам идеи Халифата, делает очевидным стремление уничтожения всех "идейных" мусульман.

По его словам, общая численность ваххабитов в России превышает 5% от общего числа мусульман (около 700 тыс. чел.). К 2013 году ваххабитские общины созданы во всех субъектах РФ, за исключением Чукотского АО, отметил Силантьев. Он рассказал, что наиболее ваххабизированным регионом России является Дагестан, в особой группе риска находится Кабардино-Балкария и Ингушетия. Повышенная активность ваххабитов, по его словам, наблюдается в Ставропольском крае и Северной Осетии. В Приволжском ФО наибольшую активность ваххабиты проявляют в Татарстане, Башкортостане, Мордовии, Саратовской, Оренбургской, Пензенской и Нижегородской областях. Крупные общины действуют в Удмуртии, Ульяновской и Самарской областях. В Южном ФО основным центром ваххабизма являются Астрахань и Ростов-на-Дону, наблюдается активность ваххабитов в республике Адыгея.

По словам Силантьева, в Центральном ФО большинство ваххабитов сконцентрировано в Москве и Московской области, в Северо-западном ФО – в Санкт-Петербурге и Карелии. "В Уральском ФО ваххабиты особо активны в Тюменской и Свердловской областях, Ямало-Ненецком АО. Также ваххабиты облюбовали Горный Алтай, Омскую область, Приморский край и Якутию", - отметил он.

По словам Силантьева, у России есть хорошие шансы очиститься от ваххабизма, "просто надо начать с этим бороться".

"Необходимо резко ужесточать законодательство и перестать думать о том, что мирным путем и договорами можно что-то решить. Надо просто их уничтожать. Как мы убивали фашистов, так надо и убивать ваххабитов", - заключил религиовед.

Roman Silantyev made a practically open call to shoot Muslims in Russia while commenting on his report "Ethnoreligious Threats". It is clear from the report that it is not only the Wahhabis that are meant. Because the announced figure of 700 thousand and the announced locations of the threat indicate that practically every Muslim who at least somehow adheres to the laws of Islam is being targeted. And the inclusion of the idea of the Caliphate among terrorist threats makes the desire to destroy all "ideological" Muslims obvious.

According to him, the total number of Wahhabis in Russia exceeds 5% of the total number of Muslims (about 700 thousand people). By 2013, Wahhabi communities were created in all subjects of the Russian Federation, with the exception of the Chukotka Autonomous Okrug, Silantyev noted. He said that the most Wahhabized region of Russia is Dagestan, with Kabardino-Balkaria and Ingushetia in the special risk group. According to him, increased activity of Wahhabis is observed in Stavropol Krai and North Ossetia. In the Volga Federal District, Wahhabis are most active in Tatarstan, Bashkortostan, Mordovia, Saratov, Orenburg, Penza and Nizhny Novgorod Oblasts. Large communities operate in Udmurtia, Ulyanovsk and Samara Oblasts. In the Southern Federal District, the main centers of Wahhabism are Astrakhan and Rostov-on-Don; Wahhabi activity is observed in the Republic of Adygea.

According to Silantyev, in the Central Federal District, the majority of Wahhabis are concentrated in Moscow and the Moscow region, in the Northwestern Federal District – in St. Petersburg and Karelia. "In the Ural Federal District, Wahhabis are especially active in the Tyumen and Sverdlovsk regions, the Yamalo-Nenets Autonomous Okrug. Wahhabis have also taken a liking to Gorny Altai, Omsk Region, Primorsky Krai and Yakutia," he noted.

According to Silantyev, Russia has a good chance of cleansing itself of Wahhabism, "we just need to start fighting it."

"We need to sharply tighten the legislation and stop thinking that something can be resolved peacefully and through agreements. We just need to destroy them. Just as we killed the fascists, so we need to kill the Wahhabis," the religious scholar concluded

Earlier, in 2015, Damir Khayretdinov, rector of the Moscow Islamic Institute, asked the Interior Ministry to investigate Silantyev's publications for inciting hatred. Instead, the agency initiated an investigation into Khayretdinov himself. Silantyev later commented that this was the fifth time authorities had refused to pursue charges against him following the Mufti Council request [18].

Silantyev's anti-Muslim rhetoric is supplemented by his extreme anti-Ukrainian and anti-Western sentiments, which is a hallmark of any RACIRS member. For decades, RACIRS narratives have been portraying Ukraine as overrun by "Nazis" and "Western cultists" and as the country that needs to be "denazified." This very narrative ultimately became the official justification for Russia's full-scale invasion of Ukraine on February 24, 2022. Despite accusing Ukrainians of Nazism, Silantyev himself has been noted for outright antisemitic statements and even condemned by the Russian Jewish Congress.

Anti-American stance in FECRIS ideology

Throughout its existence, the European Federation of Centres of Research and Information on Cults and Sects (FECRIS) has been rooted in anti-American conspiracy theories. Many European anticultists claim that an American conspiracy seeks to weaken Europe's national identity by introducing American "cults" into European countries. To support these ideas, anticultists frequently cite a 1996 book "The Mafia of Cults " and a 2001 article by French anticult journalist Bruno Fouchereau, "Sects: Trojan horse of the United States in Europe ” [19].

AU NOM DE LA LIBERTÉ RELIGIEUSE

Les sectes, cheval de Troie des Etats-Unis en Europe

Le 17 avril, devant le tribunal correctionnel de Grenoble, s'est ouvert le procès du chef d'orchestre franco-suisse Michel Tabachnik, seul inculpé de la secte du Temple solaire, dont soixante et onze membres sont morts lors de quatre « suicides collectifs », de 1994 à 1997. Le jugement de cette affaire attire à nouveau l'attention sur la nébuleuse des groupes de nature différente qui se présentent comme des religions minoritaires mais dont les activités, au caractère commercial souvent évident, sont régulièrement condamnées par les tribunaux. Au nom de la défense de la liberté religieuse, Washington vise à obtenir leur impunité. Cette connivence avec des réseaux qui virent le jour dans un creuset où convergeaient « nouvelle droite » et « néoconservatisme », le tout au nom de l'anticommunisme, entend imposer dans les esprits l'ultralibéralisme et l'inégalitarisme, socles prétendus de la société.

IN THE NAME OF RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

Sects, the Trojan horse of the United States in Europe

On April 17, before the Grenoble Criminal Court, the trial of the Franco-Swiss conductor Michel Tabachnik, the only person charged with the Solar Temple sect, seventy-one members of which died in four " collective suicides " from 1994 to 1997, began. The judgment in this case once again draws attention to the nebula of groups of different natures that present themselves as minority religions but whose activities, often of an obvious commercial nature, are regularly condemned by the courts. In the name of defending religious freedom, Washington aims to obtain their impunity. This collusion with networks that emerged in a melting pot where the " new right " and " neoconservatism " converged, all in the name of anticommunism, aims to impose on people's minds ultraliberalism and inequality, the supposed foundations of society.

This standpoint quite accurately aligns with that of Russian ideologues and propagandists who similarly argue that the "spiritual security" of the Russian World is under threat. In this narrative, blame is projected onto the collective West and alleged American conspiracies which, through "cults," infiltrate

Russia and neighboring countries, including Ukraine that is regarded as an integral part of the Russian World.

The belief among FECRIS members in the existence of an American conspiracy is also evidenced by some anticult conferences. For instance, in 2005, a conference was held in Madrid, Spain [20].

FECRIS (European Federation of Centres of Research and Information on Sectarianism) was founded on 30 June 1994 in Paris following the International Congress on Sectarianism in Barcelona in 1993. It is a non-commercial association under French law. It declared itself politically, philosophically and religiously neutral as stated in article 2 of its statutes.

Its objectives are:

Rally representative European associations concerned with contemporary organisations with sectarian and totalitarian characteristics, whether legally constituted or not, whose practices violate the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the International Convention on the Rights of the Child, European and national laws.

Represent the member associations in their contacts with the European institutions in the framework of their defence of families, individuals and democratic societies against the activities of harmful sectarian organisations.

Alert public authorities and international institutions in the event of punishable activities.

Participate in the creation of a European legal area with regard to sectarian issues.

Create an international information network.

Research and study the legal field of sectarian deviations.

To date the Federation covers 45 associations spread over 29 countries:

Argentina – Armenia – Australia – Austria – Belgium – Belarus – Bulgaria – Cyprus – Estonia – Finland – France -Germany – Ireland – Italy – Israel – Lithuania – Malta – Norway – Netherlands – Poland – Russia – Serbia – Slovakia – Sweden – Switzerland – Spain – Ukraine – United Kingdom – United States.

The wide development of our network is due to the migration of cults/sects from the USA and Western Europe to Eastern Europe resulting in the progressive creation of Eastern European associations which then became FECRIS memebers and correspondents.

In 1999, FECRIS wishing to clarify the ethical principles to which its members and correspondents adhere drew up a chart, in which it declared itself non-philosophic, non-religious, non-political and non-commercial.

On FECRIS's official webpage covering the event, the rationale for the emergence of anticult efforts overall reads as follows:

"The wide development of our network is due to the migration of cults/sects from the USA and Western Europe to Eastern Europe, resulting in the progressive creation of Eastern European associations which then became FECRIS members and correspondents."

Here, we'd like to highlight one more point that will be explained later in the article:

"In 1999, FECRIS, wishing to clarify the ethical principles to which its members and correspondents adhere, drew up a chart in which it declared itself non-philosophic, non-religious, non-political and non-commercial."

Features of Russian intelligence agencies' influence abroad

The Kremlin's influence abroad is exerted through various channels, with a key role played by the federal government agency Rossotrudnichestvo. This agency officially claims to promote cultural, educational, and humanitarian ties between Russia and other nations and has representative offices in 134 countries worldwide. In reality, Rossotrudnichestvo is a primary driver of the Kremlin's "soft power," engaging in espionage and recruitment of agents, with FSB and SVR personnel operating within its ranks. These findings were revealed by the Dossier Center in its investigative article, "What is Rossotrudnichestvo, and what is it needed for?" [21].

* Dossier Center, a nonprofit project by Mikhail Khodorkovsky, investigates and analyzes corrupt connections involving Russian politicians and intelligence officers. It aims to support the establishment of the rule of law in Russia by documenting and disseminating investigative journalism findings.

We highlight this example so as to quote the words of Rossotrudnichestvo head, Yevgeny Primakov (grandson of the late former SVR director Yevgeny Primakov). His remarks made in 2020 are quite revealing and provide insight into the evolving strategies of Russian intelligence agents abroad [22]:

"There will be entirely different criteria for the efficiency of our overseas centers. Those include the number and quality of organizations and non-governmental groups engaged in our work, such as NGOs or groups of people united by a common idea. We need to involve them in our activities.

Moreover, it is completely unnecessary for them to act under pro-Russian political slogans. Yes, we would like to receive political support and solidarity, but this is not always possible, and we understand that. We should definitely seek out people, for instance, in the UK, who would say, 'Yes, Crimea is Russian.' But where we cannot find such people, we must identify points of solidarity on any other issues of common interest. There are UN development goals, general issues like combating terrorism, poverty, diseases, and COVID. Even on non-political matters, we must find common ground. The more we engage the non-governmental sector and independent NGOs, the greater the response we will receive. Rossotrudnichestvo must continually create these points of solidarity."

At first glance, Russian agents abroad are supposed to act under overtly pro-Russian political slogans. However, as we see, that's not necessarily the case. Similarly, declarations of independence by certain organizations cannot always be taken at face value. This brings us back to the FECRIS statement cited earlier, where the anticult federation proclaimed itself non-philosophic, nonreligious, non-political, and non-commercial. Yet, as we can see, Russian intelligence targets independent nonprofit NGOs even in democratic countries.

How then can you discern truth from lies? When is democracy being defended, and when is it merely a facade serving antidemocratic forces? It is critical to scrutinize the results of an organization's actions: do they fully align with its stated goals, or do they achieve the exact opposite? Quoting an eternal truth from Christianity, "Thus you will recognize them by their fruits." — The Holy Bible, Matthew 7:20 (ESV)

In the case of the international anticult network, when questioning whose goals they serve and whose interests they advance, the answer becomes increasingly rhetorical in light of their overtly antidemocratic activities and discrediting connections. To substantiate this statement further, we will present additional facts.

Double standards and lies of anticult players

Since the full-scale Russian invasion of Ukraine, many anticult representatives have been observed shifting their rhetoric to distance themselves from their Russian counterparts within RACIRS. Moreover, in April 2022, just a couple of months after the war began, references to FECRIS' affiliate organizations in Russia mysteriously disappeared from its website. While it might be tempting to believe that the anticult players in Europe reconsidered their support for the war and its ideologues, the reality is far more cynical. This kind of public gesture of removing information from the official website appears to be nothing more than a smokescreen. The example of Roman Silantyev, the Russian anticultist working closely with the FSB, reinforces this conclusion.

On June 28–29, 2022, Roman Silantyev visited the Donbas region [23]. During a round table titled "Youth of the World Against Extremism in All Its Forms," he introduced students from the occupied territories to his fabricated "destructology" science which he describes as "expanded sectology." He also propagated anti-Ukrainian and anti-Western ideology there.

Photos from the World Russian People's Council website [23]

Despite this fact, despite the brutal hostilities in Ukrainian cities at that time and deaths of countless innocent civilians, and despite Silantiev's longstanding collaboration with the FSB and his questionable affiliations, he attended an anticult conference in Paris less than a month later, on July 15, 2022. The event focused on "the influence of religious cults on mental health, social relations, and politics." The conference was opened by Didier Pachoud, FECRIS treasurer and the leader of GEMPPI, the French branch of FECRIS. In September 2022, a press release about the event, titled "How cults affect mental health, social relations and politics," was published [24].

The press release included the following statement regarding Roman Silantiev's participation: "Professor Roman Silantiev talked about the new applied science called 'destructology,' which studies destructive ideologies of both religious and secular nature."

Screenshots of the press release from the Times News Wire website archive [24]

What does this incident reveal? It suggests that the international network of anticult agents operates as a unified entity coordinated by a single ideological center, and it is immune to world events, laws, democratic values, human rights, or genuine concern for people. Anticult players have never truly abandoned the ideology or views of their Russian colleagues in RACIRS, nor have they distanced themselves from the ideology of war, destruction, and Nazism. On the contrary, representatives of the anticult movement, regardless of the countries they operate in, continue to collaborate. They pursue shared antidemocratic, destabilizing goals, target dissenters, and promote the rise of totalitarianism and Nazism, all while cynically masking their actions under the guise of anticult rhetoric.
